

REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE TURNS DOWN ROOSEVELT

SPIRITED CONTEST IN NEW YORK
STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE SESSION.

SHERMAN WAS SELECTED

As Temporary Chairman of the Coming Republican State Convention—The Results Most Eagerly Awaited.

New York, Aug. 16.—Vice President Sherman will be temporary chairman of the state republican convention. A motion of Lloyd Griscom to select Roosevelt was voted down, the committee deciding that Mr. Roosevelt was suggested without his consent. The fight over the chairmanship was the bitterest scene in the committee for many years.

The final vote on the question was twenty to fifteen and it was only after bitter scenes that it was brought about. The significance of the turn down of Roosevelt by his own home state republican organization is commented upon freely by the Taft and anti-Taft republicans. It is taken to mean that Roosevelt's power as a state dictator in New York is broken for the time being at least but that it will bring him into the convention fight.

Some days ago it was intimated that Roosevelt had been approached by friends and asked if they might use his name and that he had given the desired permission although not offering himself as a candidate.

Commenting upon the action of the committee in rejecting the name of Roosevelt, Lloyd Griscom said: "I presented the name of former President Roosevelt after consulting with him."

"The place of temporary chairman was obviously his, not only by virtue of his having been president of the United States, but by signal services rendered by him to the republican party in New York state."

"Roosevelt was anxious to engage in the political campaign of this state, and his name at the head of the convention would have lent extraordinary prestige to the meeting and been of incalculable value to the party throughout the state."

The action forebodes a great many primary contests as it is obvious that those voting to deny him the office of temporary chairman will have to account to the enrolled republicans of their respective districts for their action.

"There was no question of endorsing or not endorsing the administration. An effort is made to show the choice of Vice President Sherman as an endorsement, whereas the choice of Roosevelt would not have been. It must of necessity fall on Roosevelt's views regarding the conduct of public affairs by his successor as well known."

Col. Roosevelt came in from Oyster Bay today and met a few visitors at his office. The Colonel left his office this afternoon, leaving word he would be back later.

The newspaper men waiting to see Roosevelt to talk with him regarding the action of the republican state committee defeating his name for temporary chairman of the state convention were disappointed in their purpose.

ELECTION RECORDS AS TO LEWIS VOTES

Candidate For Governor From Racine
Said to Have Failed to Use His Right of Franchise.

Racine, Wis., Aug. 16.—This city has furnished the newest sensation of the campaign in the discovery by some backwoodsmen of the Belle city that William Mitchell Lewis, candidate for governor of the state, has not cast a single vote in the North precinct second ward, his home district, within the memory of its most observing inhabitant.

The assertion is publicly made here that Mr. Lewis has not exercised his privilege of franchise during the last seven years, and a careful scanning of the poll lists of his precinct would seem to bear out the statement. Mr. Lewis' interest in public affairs has caused general remark in Racine and the poll lists on file with the county and city clerks have been carefully inspected. The name of William Mitchell Lewis was not found on a single list of the last six years, although the complete record could not be made owing to the poor filing facilities in the city clerk's office where a number of the official records for municipal elections could not at the time be located.

At none of the general or judicial elections of recent years has Mr. Lewis voted and the only place where his name was seen was on the list of registered voters filed on Aug. 25, 1908. This was in preparation for the presidential election of Nov. 3, 1908, but Mr. Lewis did not vote. At important judicial elections on April 2, 1907, and April 7, 1908, the name of William M. Lewis does not appear.

Going down to the more important municipal elections, it was not possible to secure a complete record for the reasons already stated but on the several lists that were located the name was missing.

TENNESSEE G. O. P. HAS HIGH HOPES

Great Enthusiasm Over Prospects
Manifest at State Convention in Nashville Today.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 16.—Enthusiasm appeared to be the keynote of the Republican state convention which assembled in this city today for the nomination of candidates for governor and state railroad commissioner. Never before in the history of the party in Tennessee have the Republicans been more hopeful of success than they are now. Predictions of a Republican executive to succeed Governor Patterson when the latter's term expires are heard on all sides.

Republican confidence is based not so much upon the strength of their own party as upon the disaffection in the Democratic ranks. The result of the recent judicial election, in which the independent candidates were successful over those endorsed by the State administration, showed conclusively that a restoration of harmony in the Democratic rank is out of the question for the present at least. The Republicans refrained from nominating a judicial ticket and threw their strength to the support of the independent candidates, in return the Republicans expect that the independent Democrats, or a large part of them, will vote for the Republican gubernatorial ticket in November in order to make the downfall of Governor Patterson complete.

If the coalition which buried the administration judicial ticket stands until the fall election, it is believed that the retirement of Governor Patterson to private life may be accomplished. The Governor's only hope is that those Democrats who combined with the Republicans in the recent election will return to the party fold before November. If they do not, then the election of a Republican governor in Tennessee seems to be not only possible but probable.

Was Robbed of $110: Floyd Blyden of Sharon, who had his pocket picked on circus day, lost $110 instead of $20 as was reported at the time. The man who was relieved of $20 was C. H. Boyd, a Brooklyn, Wis., real estate dealer.

The recent encampment of troops cost the state $150,000 and if the present plan is carried out it will cost much more. HANDSOME HOME ON FARM BURNED DOWN

Fire, Thought to Have Been Started by "Tramps," Destroyed Residence Near Monroe.

[Special to the Gazette.]
Monroe, Wis., Aug. 14.—George Heller's home in the town of Adams took fire and burned to the ground during the absence of the family from home. It is supposed that a tramp who was walking in the field close to the house at the time the members left, set fire to the house. The Misses Emma Heller and Ida Meythaler of this city were visiting at the Heller home and in the evening the host and hostess took them out for an automobile ride at about 8 o'clock. The fire man was on his way back from the Heller home when he saw the blaze. The Heller home was quickly given to the flames and it was burned to the ground with all the household effects. Clothing and jewelry belonging to the lady guests was also destroyed. It had not been for hard fighting by the neighbors, the other farm buildings and the timber would also have been destroyed. Mr. Heller was on his way home, a mile and a half away, when he saw his home in flames. The farm was purchased a short time ago from Mr. Heller's father, Chris. Heller, who moved to this city. The loss is estimated at between $5,000 and $6,000, with insurance of $1,500 in the Monticello Mutual Insurance company.

CONTRACT TO JUDA MAN.

J. C. McNaught of Juda was the successful bidder for hauling the muck between the depots, getting the price on a bid of $500. W. J. Blackford's contract expired yesterday and will continue to carry the muck until Mr. McNaught, who recently underwrote an operation on his eyes in a hospital at Dayton, Ohio, is able to be on duty. Mr. Blackford put in a bid to carry the muck for $600.

Marshall W. O. Hunt arrested George Redding, a farm hand, and took him to jail for habitual drunkenness. His hearing was before Justice Baltzer at 10 o'clock this morning.

ABANDONED IT
For the Old Fashioned Coffee was Killing.

"I always drank coffee with the rest of the family, for it seemed as if it were nothing for breakfast if we did not have it on the table. I had been troubled for some time with my head, which did not feel right. This trouble grew worse steadily. Some times it would beat fast and at other times very slowly, so that I would hardly be able to do work for an hour or two after breakfast, and if I walked up hill it gave me a severe pain. I had no idea of what the trouble was until a friend suggested that perhaps it might be caused by coffee drinking. I tried leaving off the coffee and began drinking Postum. The change came quickly. I am now glad to say that I am entirely well of the heart trouble and attribute the cure to leaving off coffee and the use of Postum. A number of my friends have abandoned coffee and have taken up with Postum, which they are using steadily. There are some people that make Postum very weak and tasteless, but if it is boiled long enough, according to directions, it is a very delicious beverage. We have never used any of the old fashioned coffee since Postum was first started in our house." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pags. "There's a Reason." Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

DROUTH BROKEN BY VERY SEVERE RAIN

Storm Last Evening Did Much Good to the Crops and Lawns, Torrent Flowed Down the Hills.

With the heavy rain last evening the long continued drouth that has held Janesville and the immediate vicinity in its grip since before the Fourth was broken. For over an hour the waters poured down in a perfect torrent and the down town gutters and storm sewers were taxed to their capacity to carry for the evening. It soaked the gardens and lawns doing much more good than hosing for days and even the trees which had held their limbs in a drooping position looking scorched and bare picked up a lift. It rained so hard in some of the rural districts that fields of corn that had become parched and dried were almost laid flat by the washing away of the soil from their roots. It is said however, that with today being cloudy it will work no serious damage. It has been frequent in other parts of the state but Janesville appears to have suffered exceptionally this year. The weather indications for tonight are fair and cooler.

A record of severe drouth, as far back as the landing of the pilgrims, as given in an exchange, those who think that the present dry spell is the longest ever known should read the following:

In the summer of 1657, 75 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1662, 80 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1688, 81 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1739, 92 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1749, 108 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1762, 123 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1802, 22 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1812, 28 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1856, 24 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1871, 42 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1874, 26 days in succession without rain.
In the summer of 1875, 26 days in succession without rain.
It will be seen that the longest drouth that ever occurred in America was in the summer of 1762. No rain fell from May 1 to Sept. 1, making 125 days without rain. Many of the inhabitants sent to England for hay and grain.

FEW REALIZE THE WORK OF HANDLING CIRCUS TRAINS

Few of those who crowded about the circus trains at the five points while the show bands and switchmen were unloading or loading the tents, wagons and animals from the eighty odd cars needed to transport the varied and clumsy paraphernalia of the white tops, fully realized the difficulties against which the railroad officials and switchmen were forced to contend on such an occasion.

While the circus routeabouts take the work as a matter of course, for it is an everyday occurrence with them and each has his own tasks, to the switchmen it is a time of trial. In the first place, the presence of eighty cars in a confined yard, crowded everywhere. The switch-engines are forced to work on restricted stretches of track and at top speed for the trains must be out on time.

Then, again, the great number of lanterns and gasoline torches present make it hard for the engineers to distinguish signals. Even with these difficulties to contend with, the switchmen would not complain if it were not for the crowd. Doubtless it is interesting to watch a tent city being loaded upon or unloaded from wheels but in their desire to see everything, the spectators take risks that they would not otherwise incur.

Not infrequently groups of four or five will station themselves between two sections of a train and absolutely disregard the warning shouts of the switchmen. They will congregate along the tracks so thickly that the yardmen are sometimes knocked from the grab run. If there happens to be a few drunken roughs or "rubes" in the crowd, which frequently happens when the circus is loading after the evening performance, violence is necessary.

Last Saturday evening when the Ringling Bros. were loading, a farm hand who had evidently passed up the red "limo" for other more cheering beverages, stood between the rails and defied to the crossing tender to save his life for one of the switch-engines happened to be pushing a long string of empties toward the crossing. He was felled twice by the tower-man's flag stick before he could be persuaded to move.

Next to the roughs, a party of good-natured girls are the most difficult to handle. They come ostensibly for the purpose of seeing the circus unloads but from stray bits of conversation concerning what "he" or "she" said and did, it is merely to continue a line of talk from the last meeting of the sewing circle. These paid circus conversationalists are really indignant when warned to "look out" for an approaching six-horse team or an engine. Possibly long practice in blocking a sidewalk to discuss "someone" leads them to think that the team or engine will turn out in order not to disturb them.

Loading the trains at night is generally harder on the yard force than unloading. The presence of both the yardmaster and roundhouse foreman is necessary for the show officials are generally unfamiliar with the tracks and the engines and train crews must be on the spot in order to get the trains out as soon as they are made up.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

HOW MUCH this or that cost—what this one is earning, and how much that one is making—

Do you realize how large a part, how amazingly large a part, these subjects and similar ones make of our daily conversations?

An I sat alone at dinner in a restaurant the other evening, the talk of the people at the table behind me came unsolicited to me.

Occasionally an unflattering remark was made, but for the most part, the fragments that broke upon my ears were something like this:

"Did you know the M's now thinking cost every penny of $5,000?"

"That's nothing. Charley S. is going to have a racer built especially for him, and it's going to cost $7,500."

"—when his father allows him $20 just to run that car. I think it's absurd to think he can't do it on that."

"That then, they say, it isn't the gasoline or even the repairs that cost so much in running a motor, as it is the entertaining of all kinds that a-taking people motoring out."

"—lovely gown? Well, no, I don't fancy it particularly. That trimming looks awfully expensive, but I saw some in a window and I liked it, and it only cost about a dollar a yard."

"—and they say he is making $10,000 a year. You see, he went into business for himself. That's the place for brains, I think."

On the way to my home, in the trolley, I sat in front of two women who were arguing as to whether it cost more to have one's gowns made or buy them ready-made. Each was trying to prove her side of the question by numerous price citations from her own wardrobe.

I walked up the street with an old resident of the neighborhood, who had come back to make a call. As we passed the house where my horse neighbor lives, "How, sir, he did—cost twenty thousand for that horse the minute he went under the wire," floated out to us.

We came to an open field near my house. In the corner of it a little plaster building had just been put up.

"The old denizen regarded it with interest.

"Yes," I ran on in explanation. "Mr. C. put it up for his daughter. She was married last fall. You didn't know? Yes, a bank clerk in her father's bank. Artistic little place, isn't it?" And then, with effusive unceremoniousness, "What would you think it cost? $4,000. Isn't that terrible for such a little place?"

"The old denizen of the neighborhood passed on down aside street. He didn't look back. It was lucky that he didn't, for if he had he would have surely thought me insane. For in the consciousness of my own contribution to the chorus that had irritated me so all the evening, I was laughing aloud to myself and saying:

"Et tu, Ruthe!"

Perhaps you think I'm exaggerating or fabricating a bit.

I won't attempt to exonerate myself. Instead, I'll just ask you to watch your friends' and your own conversation for a day or two for such references, and I'll be willing to bet that test exonerate me.

Should one never talk of prices and wages and costs and values?

Yes, but never and perpetually are a long ways apart, and between them lies a golden mean.

It seems to me that the tendency to measure success almost entirely by a financial standard is one of the worst disease spots of our twentieth century life.

Our perpetual talk of money is one of the symptoms of this disease. I don't suppose you can cure a symptom without curing the disease, but oh, I do wish we could do something for both.

THEORY VS. KNOWLEDGE IN CHILD CULTURE.

By MARY HESSELL.

It is an easy task to bring up children—theoretically. It is when the real work of applying theory to practice begins that one begins to take ticks in the line.

Philosophers of the "good" who know a lot—but have a little demonstrated her knowledge.

If a child should be brought under all the rules published for the benefit of parents it would be a queer little animal. It would never know just what was going to be done with it for one unfallible rule says one thing, and another infallible rule advises something totally different.

After all the rules of procedure in making a perfect man or woman out of the plastic material of the child vary according to that material.

A child born with certain tendencies and a strong bias in certain directions should not be ruled as should a child who has opposite tendencies and preferences. We make mistakes in asserting that a child has traits by ignorance, before that child. It is impossible to tell just when a child begins to understand more than we dream it is comprehending. Certain things come to children "out of the air," the old black mummy's used to say. It really seems that there is truth in the statement, but we have to reckon also with the thoughtless talk of older people. To state that a child does a certain thing like an older person makes a condition that the child is vain enough to think interesting. Why should he not think so when it comes talk upon his small self?

A woman who is noted for unselfishness told me that she was a very selfish child. She was the youngest and her older brothers were a loving, indulgent set of youngsters. "I didn't like to have everything she liked. As she grew older her parents tried to shame her by calling attention to her selfish habits and contrasting them with those of the boys. She says that she remembers reasoning it out in her baby brain that she might as well be selfish as to have the name. She would get more by it. So until she was old enough to correct the ugly trait because she so desired, she was accounted a selfish child.

Her parents made that rule for her. It was their fault. She would have been easy to divert into a more noble course, but she could not be driven. It might have worked in some children, but not with this child.

Never talk of children's faults before others. If they have traits that you deplore do your reasoning in private. Let no other child hear you—and never tell of a child's traits that you dislike as if they were virtues.

That is a common fault with mothers and fathers. To say a child has his father's temper makes the child feel that he is not responsible. When a child is pert and impudent to say she is like some of the relatives is to confirm her in admiration for her conduct.

Children do not love the shining examples held up for emulation. It is natural for John to throw mud on Reginald's clean, knickerbockers. If those knickerbockers have been held up to him as an example he would do well to pattern after. Half the unkind things said by older people is Monday. Mr. Draper has been in the employ of the Illinois Railroad Co. for the past seventeen years.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

OUR RAPID AGE.

Last month Hamilton, the aviator, drove his aeroplane eleven miles in ten minutes. And he complained that his engine worked poorly.

By the time you read this that record may have been broken several times.

This is the age of bird men.

And, as the slow going stagecoach was superseded by the locomotive, so the highest speed of the locomotive will be considered a slow pace compared with that of the flying machine.

There are great possibilities in aerial navigation.

Now the aeroplane must carry a heavy engine and fuel for it. Some of these days the power will come in electric force directly from the earth, the great storage battery.

Now the car must be open, which catches the wind and impedes progress. By and by the aerial car will be a closed one. And men will fly their machines several times faster than they do now.

"When?" you say.

Certainly. No reasonable prophecy respecting the speed of the future flying machine may be considered fanciful.

Another thing:

Major General J. Franklin Hull, former chief of staff of the United States army, says that within five years aeroplanes will be built to carry each a crew of five men and a small cargo of explosives and that guns will be devised to fire upon and destroy air craft from the ground.

We shall see the realization of that prophecy.

Which leads you to ask: what is to be the moral effect of these things.

Never fear.

The Almighty did not intend that man should fulfill his destiny as a worm crawling on the surface of the earth. As man has conquered land and water, so will he conquer the air.

Also—

It is true that as the means of destruction multiply wars must diminish. The time is coming rapidly when nations no longer can afford to go to war.

Never fear.

The more we become the masters of the elements the more must we become the masters of ourselves.

J. A. Gracie has returned from a business trip to Canada.

BABY'S MILK.

Sterilized milk is not fit food for infants. Even pasteurizing, which requires a lower temperature, is injurious, notwithstanding the fact that the process destroys many disease-producing germs. If the natural food cannot be supplied, "certified" milk is the next best available. In many cases buttermilk made from fresh milk artificially is better. In this artificial buttermilk a specially "friendly" germ is cultivated and the development of others prevented. Goat's milk is preferable to cow's. Less than half a dozen cases of tuberculosis in goats are recorded while the cow is peculiarly liable to it, especially since they are so closely housed, overtaken at times and confined in close quarters. A goat can be kept on a city lot, it is easily fed and it may easily be trained to milking.

Costs Only One-Third.

You save two-thirds the cost of common Coffee, and better yet, you conserve the health of your entire family when you serve Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee at meal times. One 25-cent package—a full pound and a half—will give you exactly 10 cups.

And the aroma, the golden amber color, the wholesome, healthful satisfaction will actually please you better than even your favorite brand of real Coffee. That Health Coffee has not even a single grain of real Coffee in it. And therein lies your principal gain. The poisonous caffeine of common Coffee is avoided. It is pure roasted cereals, malt, nuts, etc., of Health Coffee, will bring you health and vigor and renewed strength, for its elements are food-like and positively helpful.

And Health Coffee is "made in a minute." No more tedious tedious boiling is at all necessary. Try Health Coffee once and you will write Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis., for his free booklet—Coffee Dangerous!

LITTLE ADDITIONAL LIGHT ON MYSTERY OF COAT AND HAT

That Were Found on the River Bank
—C. H. Dixon of Manitowish, Wis., Was Apparently the Owner.

None of the speculations concerned with the discovery of a hat and coat on the river bank back of Dr. B. H. Dudley's residence on South Main street Sunday morning have thus far been confirmed but the mystery will doubtless be unraveled before many more days have passed.

Letters found in the coat pocket, from which the name of the person addressed had in all but one instance been carefully removed, indicated that the supposed article was a harness-maker by trade; that he had been offered a job with Wallace, Smith & Co. in Milwaukee on June 24; and that he had been recommended to Edward Markow of this city by Charles H. Nowacki of Clinton on July 13.

Acting Chief of Police John Brown learned by telephone inquiry that Mr. Nowacki remembered the individual but not his name. One of the envelopes which was only partially destroyed gives the name and address: "C. H. Dixon, Manitowish, Wis."

Edward Amorphi noticed a man about forty years of age, about 5 feet, 5 inches in height, and wearing a mustache, seated upon the river bank in that vicinity on Friday last and observed that he stood there a large part of the day. When, on Sunday morning, he discovered the hat and coat in almost the identical spot where the stranger had been sitting away the time, he immediately called up the police station. As was stated in yesterday's Gazette, the green hat bore marks showing that it had been purchased at a local store.

Upon going through the letter files, Frank Ehlth of the Bassett & Ehlth Saddlery Co., found that C. H. Dixon has twice written the firm asking for a job—once last fall and again last June—and that the letters had been sent from Manitowish and Alexia, Wis.

In both instances the writer was offered employment but he never appeared to claim the position nor answered the reply letters.

The affair takes additional interest from the fact that during the past few weeks the Bassett and Ehlth Company have been employing many men to take the place of the strikers and these men complain they are not treated with kindness by the strikers who are still in the city. The finding of the hat and coat under these circumstances leads to a serious question in the minds of many.

PROMPT WORK SAVED THE BARN AND SILO

Lightning Struck Barn on Schultz Farm Stunned Three Men Who Extinguished Blaze.

During the storm Monday afternoon lightning struck the barn belonging to Emil C. Schultz, about two miles out on Milton avenue. The barn is covered with patent roofing which spread the flames and ran along the eaves gutter, then to one of the hoops of the silo where it ignited a fair-sized flame. In the barn were Mr. Schultz, Frank Rauch and his son and two other men, together with two horses. All were stunned but managed to get a ladder and a bucket of water in time to extinguish the flames. The loss is nominal.

about the attack, with the chance of coming face to face with some of his enemies. It was obvious that swift and elaborate machinery would be set in motion to catch him. Of course, there were many places where he could conceal himself for an hour, but—

Tom Wallingham's office. Why had he not thought of that before? But he was at Arradale with Bessie, but the clerks would tell Orme stay in the reception room until it was time to start for his train. Indeed, Orme remembered that Bixby, the head clerk, had been at the wedding of Tom and Bessie—had in fact taken charge of the arrangements at the church.

Moreover, Tom's office was in this very building—the Rookery. Doubtless it was for this reason that the Rookery had popped into his head when he gave directions to the cab-driver on North Parker street.

Hurrying to the elevators, Orme was about to enter the nearest one, when suddenly a hand seized his elbow and pulled him to one side. He turned quickly and saw—Alcantara.

The minister was breathing rapidly. It was plain that he had made a quick pursuit, but though his chest heaved and his mouth was partly open, his eyes were curiously steady. "One minute, Mr. Orme," he said, forcing his lips to a smile. "I had hard work to follow you. There was no other cab, but a small boy told me that you directed your driver to the Rookery. Therefore I got on a street car and rode till I found a cab." He said all this in the most casual tone, retaining his hold on Orme's elbow as though his attitude was familiar and friendly.

Perhaps he was thus detailing his own adventures merely to gain time; or perhaps he was endeavoring to puzzle Orme.

But Orme was simply annoyed. He knew how dangerous Alcantara could be. "I am tired of being followed, Senator," he said, disgustedly, feeling his elbow.

Alcantara continued to smile. "That is part of the game," he said. "Then you will find the game serious." Orme shut his lips together and glanced about for a policeman.

Alcantara again grasped his elbow. "Do you want publicity?" he asked. "Your principals do not. Publicity will injure us all."

Orme had been given enough light to know that the South American's words were true. "If it comes to publicity," continued Alcantara with an ugly grin, "I will have you arrested for stealing a certain important document and offering to sell it to me."

"Rubbish!" laughed Orme. "That would never work at all. Too many persons understand my part in this matter. And then—" as he noticed the flash of triumph in Alcantara's eyes—"I could not be arrested for stealing a document which was not in my possession." It was too late; Alcantara had been able to verify his strong suspicion that Orme had the papers.

A wave of anger swept over Orme. "Publicity or no publicity," he said, "unless this annoyance stops, I will have you arrested."

Alcantara smiled. "That would not pay, Mr. Orme. There would be countercharges and you would be much delayed—perhaps even till after midnight tonight. You Americans do not know how to play at diplomacy, Mr. Orme."

Controlling himself, Orme hurried quickly to the nearest elevator. He timed his action; the starter was just about to close the door as he hurried in. But quick though he was, Alcantara was close behind him. The agile South American squeezed into the elevator with an easy grace that the door caught him as he went.

"Here, what are you trying to do?" shouted the starter.

Alcantara, pressing in against Orme, did not reply.

The starter jerked the door open, and glared at Alcantara. The steady and undisturbed eye of the minister had its effect, and after a moment of hesitation the starter banged the door shut and gave the signal and the car leaped upward.

Tom Wallingham's office was on the eighth floor. Though he knew that Alcantara would climb to him, Orme could think of nothing better to do than to go straight to the office and count on the assistance of Bixby, who would certainly remember him. Accordingly he called out "Bixby!" and, ignoring Alcantara, left the elevator and walked down the hall, the South American at his elbow.
